SURVIVING AIDS

Three Years And Counting

by Brad Edwards

Maybe it's the Lehigh Valley air I breathe, dancing at the Stonewall for an adrenalin high, frolicking at a Lambda picnic, or the support and friendship available at the Lambda Center. Maybe it's the ten or so grams of vitamin C I swallow every day. No one seems to know why I am part of an ever-growing minority—survivors of AIDS for over three years.

AIDS is usually defined as fatal and fast. It ain't necessarily so. If you passed me on the Hamilton Mall, you wouldn't suspect I was sick. Although I've volunteered for inpatient treatments with experimental drugs, I've never been hospitalized for an illness related to my condition.

A recent issue of The Advocate had a surprising news item. A doctor from the New York State Department of Health "studied the statistical survival patterns of AIDS patients and found that during the fourth year of illness, there is a leveling-off of the probability of dying. After that time, the probability appears to approach zero."

Say what? Yes, Virginia, you can believe in fairy tales.

Dr. John Whyte of the Boston AIDS Action Committee is beginning a study looking at factors that might have helped people like me to survive and help healthy people to stay that way. I'll relay the results when I get them.

As of the middle of July, Lehigh County reported a total of eight cases, half of which were diagnosed in 1985. Northampton County, which includes part of Bethlehem, reports seven cases. Many experts believe that case numbers are grossly underreported because of misdiagnoses or the narrow guidelines used by the Centers for Disease Control.

Reports are also based on place of diagnosis so the number of L.V. residents diagnosed in NY or Philadelphia, for example, is not included in the local count.

Good news is that AIDS therapy centers have been funded by Uncle Sam in 14 medical centers to study experimental treatments for AIDS and ARC (AIDS-Related Complex). The closest to the Lehigh Valley are: Memorial Sloan-Kettering, New York University Medical Center and the University of Rochester, all in New York, the University of Pittsburgh, (nothing in Philadelphia), and Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

One last thing. In December, 1984, a Call-Chronicle headline writer called me "L.V. Man Dying of AIDS." That should be "L.V. Man Living With AIDS," thank you.

BIRTHDAY BASH

by Bob Sweeney

More than fifty well wishers came to the Lambda Center on Friday, September 19 to celebrate the second anniversary of the center.

The evening was filled with good conversation, good people, and an overall good time. Conversation ran from politics to "What did you do last night?"

Members and friends gorged themselves on cake and drank bubbly to the music of D. J. Terry Rich.

Mr. Paul Kendall gave a welcoming speech, making everyone feel at home whether it was their first time there or their tenth time.

Everyone got the chance to meet new friends and to say hello to old friends.

In Mr. Kendall's words, I, too, hope to be at the center's 20th Birthday Party!

Not a destination

A life shared the fading of blue
A thought of happiness
the thought of you
A first snowfall

A spring flower

A life full of unending joy
Like a grateful child

A feeling so scarce

MCC Column

by Irene Kratz

Success is measured by different types of yardsticks. The event or people involved in any given project may determine what and who is counted to claim success or failure. Perhaps money or time spent and taken in is the rule. Sometimes the goal may appear vague and the undefined measure is what is most concrete. The latter grouping is the concept that was used to declare The AIDS Vigil of Prayer a remarkable success.

As part of an international event, a 50-hour vigil of prayer was held by the Metropolitan Community Church in the Lehigh Valley, from Friday, September 5, through Sunday, September 7, at St. John's Lutheran Church (5th and Walnut Streets, Allentown). The time of worship and continual meditation was an opportunity for people to share their concerns and grief within a community during any of the three services, or in the quiet and solitude of St. John's chapel. A similar schedule of events was held in more than 265 cities in the United States, Europe, Australia and New Zealand the same weekend.

The success of the vigil is still being felt. Although the weekend was sponsored by M.C.C., it was open to all churches and synagogues for support and participation. We sent more than 350 letters to church leaders and received 35 responses with only one negative answer. Twenty clergy people, representing seven denominations, attended. Others indicated they would pray and/or preach about the effects of the disease in their own worship services.

IN MARCH—

Lamda Center Offers Spain Tour

Seeing the world is always more exciting when friends of our own kind are along for the fun. So it is with enthusiasm that the Lambda Center offers its members and their friends an opportunity for some travel to sunny Spain next year that may prove to be the best antidote yet for the winter blues.

Planned for March 16 to 23, 1987, when that longing for sun reaches its ultimate, the trip features seven days and six nights on the beautiful Costa del Sol in southern Spain, where you may choose to spend your time basking on the beach, exploring the numerous shops of the area or taking guided day trips to nearby cities of interest.

The amazingly low cost of the trip is $549 per person double occupancy. This fee includes round trip air fare via Iberia Airlines from Kennedy International Airport; transfers in Spain from airport to hotel; accommodations for six nights at the Hotel Natali (a three-star hotel) in Torremolinos; continental breakfast daily; dinner daily, a half-day tour of the city, and all room taxes and service charges.

For small additional fees, as indicated, you may also participate in day trips to Granada (for an extra $35), to Sevilla ($45), to Tangier ($75), to Ronda ($35), to Gibraltar ($45) and to Nerja ($20).

A round-trip bus from Allentown to JFK Airport will be provided at a cost per person that will be determined by the number of participants.

The trip has been arranged through Bravo Tours, Inc., and will be led by Art Arnold, a frequent visitor to Spain and an experienced tour leader who has arranged and directed six tours to Europe, including three previous visits to the Costa del Sol.

For further information and enrollment forms, contact Art Arnold, P.O. Box 363, East Stroudsburg, PA 18301. Spaces are limited, so reservations should be made early. Final payments will be required by January 15, 1987.

It was a moving experience to be part of a service that had up to 15 vested clergy people participating in either the Friday or Sunday-evening service. Those who came to pray, sing and listen received comfort and hope, and expressed their joy that the religious community of the Valley understands we are all affected by this tragedy. They came not for confirmation or condemnation of lifestyles, but to pray together. And that is what happened.

We were blessed with good media coverage and hospitality from our hosts, who went more than that extra mile.

We were blessed to share in ways that are too rare in this polarized world. We know that our prayers will be answered.

The closing moments on Sunday evening captured a measure of the success of the heart. Without instruction or words, those who were in St. John's joined hands and formed a circle to sing along with the theme of the vigil, "That's What Friends Are For."

People came to the vigil out of concern, fear and grief. Young and old, gay and straight, from any and all church traditions, stood together and experienced friendship. That is success.

ANTINOUS: THAT BOY FROM BITHYNIA

The next lecture, set for 7:30 p.m. October 16 at the Lambda Center, will leap back 2,000 years to take a look at a gay relationship that shook the ancient world. It was between the Roman Emperor Hadrian and his lover, Antinous.

Although ignored, even covered up, by historians for centuries, the story of the Roman absolute ruler who made his Greek boy lover a god, scandalized even the jaded world of imperial Rome. Find out why the sacrifice of this beautiful boy for the man he loved became a cult that by the 3rd century rivaled that of Christianity.

Even St. Jerome, in denouncing the cult, called Antinous, "a boy of outstanding beauty."

What power did this young boy have that made old women and young men pray to him. It's a beautiful love story, and you will not forget Antinous, that boy from Bithynia.

These lectures are being offered by Le-Hi-Ho at a new meeting time on the third Thursday evening of each month--with occasional exceptions. Take note of the meeting dates in the Lambda Valley Monthly. See you there.

As most of us know, lesbian and gay history has always been in the shadows. Part of the purpose of the gay history lectures being offered by Le-Hi-Ho and held in the Lambda Center is to dispel the myths and reveal the role played by gay people down through the centuries.

The first lecture on September 18 told the story of Alan Turing, the British intelligence agent who cracked the Nazi code during World War II. But Turing was also gay and suffered persecution by the post-war British state that was so severe, he was driven to suicide.

Women's Column

by Desiree

Things begin again in the fall...

A new sense of community for the women of the Lehigh Valley has arrived. With the closing of a major social outlet, many women are at a loss as where to meet, socialize and simply be as women. Take heart, all is not lost!

A primary source of activity continues to be The Lambda Center's Women's Group. Women gather at the Center the 1st and 3rd Monday each month for evenings of fun. October promises to be hot, beginning with Games Night, October 6th. A wide and interesting assortment of games is envisioned. Find out that culture doesn't have to be boring on October 20th, when "Women, Nudity and Art" will headline the evening. Bring your sketches! Future events include Videos for Women and A Thanksgiving Pot-Luck Dinner to celebrate ourselves.

New to the valley is Lesbians Unlimited of the Lehigh Valley (L.U.L.V.). This group is facilitating social interaction among women through alternative low-cost events. Their first event, a picnic held September 13 was a successful mix of sunshine, good food and great people (new faces came as far as Brooklyn). L.U.L.V. can be reached at P.O. Box 665, Trexlertown, PA 18087.

Did you ever sit back and think, "How can I become more involved?" One way is to stop in at a Women's Night. Another way, send information about those events that are interesting to the women of the Lehigh Valley, be it music festivals, films, lectures, dinners, etc., Let us all have fun!

A Feminist Film Festival will be held October 11 at Prosser Hall, Moravian College, sponsored by The National Organization of Women and promises to be quite an eyeful....

The women of the Lehigh Valley need to have their voices heard. Speak out! I would like this column to be a forum to address issues facing you, us, apart, and together. Suggestions, ideas, information greatly appreciated. Send all such to Women's Column, c/o Lambda Valley Monthly, Box 1637, Allentown, PA 18105.
